The node.js logo features the word "node.js" in a large, white, sans-serif font. The letter "j" is lowercase and green, while the rest of the letters are white. Below the main text, the tagline "the JavaScript runtime built on Chrome's V8 engine" is written in a smaller, gray, sans-serif font.

Jekyll is a simple, blog aware, static site generator. It takes a template directory (representing the raw form of a website), runs it through Textile or Markdown and Liquid converters, and spits out a complete, static website suitable for serving with Apache or your favorite web server. This is also the engine behind GitHub Pages, which you can use to host your project's page or blog right here from GitHub.

Getting Started

- Install the gem
- Read up about its Usage and Configuration
- Take a gander at some existing Sites
- Have questions? Post them on the Mailing List

Diving In

- Migrate from your previous system
- Learn how the YAML Front Matter works
- Put information on your site with Template Data
- Customize the Permalinks your posts are generated with
- Highlight code, include other files, and transform text with Liquid Extensions.
